CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION, PH.D.

The PhD program In the Department of Curriculum & Instruction aims to produce school-based researchers. Each Ph.D. student has a specialization that is affiliated with a curriculum area such as reading, science, mathematics or one of the social sciences.

Overview:

- 1. Students will take 48 hours minimum in courses related to their major area of research interest in Curriculum and Instruction.
- 2. Students will take 24 hours of support coursework in educational research and humanistic/behavioral studies.
- 3. Students will take 6 hours of free electives, such as additional educational research courses.
- 4. Students will take 24 hours of dissertation.
- 5. Total coursework, including the dissertation, will be 102 hours.

The proposed Ph.D. program will require a comprehensive examination when coursework is within six hours or less of completion. The comprehensive examination will be developed and scored by the doctoral program committee, which includes the advisor. Should a student be deemed not to have passed the examination, the students will have one more opportunity to take and pass the comprehensive examination. Upon successful completion of the comprehensive examination, the student will identify the doctoral dissertation committee membership, which will include an advisor. The student will develop the dissertation proposal with input from the committee, present it to the committee for approval, and revise as needed until it is acceptable to the committee. When the dissertation proposal has been deemed as acceptable, the student will carry out the dissertation study and write the dissertation reporting the study and its implications and conclusions. The dissertation report will be presented and defended at an open meeting in which the dissertation committee will participate and determine what, if any, revisions are needed and whether the dissertation is accepted.
